

HEART ATTACK IS FATAL TO DR. S. B. TOWN

END COMES TO PROMINENT CITIZEN EARLY TUESDAY MORNING

WIDELY KNOWN EDUCATOR

Deceased Was Connected With De-
Pauw University For Years. Death
Came As Great Shock.

Dr. Salem B. Town, age 86 years, died suddenly at his home on south Locust street shortly before three o'clock Tuesday morning. His death was due to a heart attack, from which he had suffered only a couple of hours. Dr. Town had before long been suffering from a heart attack, but none was of a serious nature.

Dr. Town was the oldest living alumnus of DePauw university, having been graduated with the class of 1866. As a mark of honor for being the oldest alumnus, he was presented with the Goodwin Memorial cane a few years ago, it going to the oldest living graduate. It was presented to the university for the oldest living graduate by the late Dr. Thomas Goodwin, DePauw's first graduate.

Dr. Town is survived by four daughters, Miss Elmer Kirkwood Town and Laura Frances Town, at home, Mrs. Mary Lockwood, Shanghai, China, Mrs. Elizabeth Kimberlin, Danville, and two sons, Salem L. Town, Los Angeles, Calif., and Lockwood J. Town, New York.

The sudden passing of Dr. Town was keenly felt by his large circle of friends in Greencastle and DePauw university. He had spent the last quarter of a century in Greencastle and was known to all citizens and as late as Monday afternoon was downtown and it was his custom to greet in a kindly way, all of his acquaintances he met on his downtown trips.

Dr. Town was born in Paoli, Ind., August 19, 1847. He was graduated from DePauw university, then Indiana Asbury college, with the class of 1866. He received his M. A. degree from the institution in 1869. Later he entered the medical profession and held degrees from the Chicago Medical college, now Northwestern University School of Medicine; his doctor of medicine degree from the Bellevue Hospital Medical College of New York university and the S. T. D. degree from DePauw university.

Before entering on his professional career, Dr. Town became an instructor in mathematics at Hamlin university, but gave up teaching work for his medical training work and after receiving his degree from that field entered on the practice of medicine and the sale of drugs at Frankfort, Ind. He evidently still yearned for a different work, because in 1875, he gave up his medical practice to enter the ministry, being admitted to the Northwest Indiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. He held a long list of splendid pastorates in this conference, among them being charges at Argos, Dayton, Rossview, South Bend, Crawfordville, Terre Haute and Greencastle. It was while holding the pastorate of the old College Avenue church in Greencastle, that he came here to make his home and ever remain a splendid citizen of the community, always standing for the good and the right and aiding his home community in every way possible. He served as superintendent of the Greencastle district following his pastorate of the local church.

Following his active service in the Northwest Conference, Dr. Town was transferred to the university in an executive capacity, being named financial secretary of the university in 1905 and in 1912 he was made treasurer, which place he held until his retirement in 1928. It was during the years that he was actively associated with the university and with the city as pastor of the College Avenue church that he became widely known to students, alumni and citizens of this section of Indiana.

Dr. Town held a close and unique relationship among DePauw students, faculty members and alumni through his many years of acquaintanceship, as student, alumnus, and official.

During his active college career, Dr. Town was a member of the Phi Kappa Psi social fraternity and the Phi Beta Kappa scholastic fraternity. Only a week ago Dr. Town was invited to attend the annual Phi Psi state banquet at Indianapolis, where he was one of the speakers.

Dr. Town was the type of the older citizen who has helped build up this state and community to its present high level. He was the type of citizen who stood for the right and never compromised with anything that did not come up to his high standard of citizenship. He was the type that is gradually disappearing from our midst, and the kind of citizen that the present crisis needs most.

He will be keenly missed by those who came in contact with him frequently or occasionally, because to the latter he always had a kind word and a friendly smile that dispelled any gloom that might be hiding in the heart and his friendship and acquaintance will be something that those near and dear to him will always cherish.

Funeral arrangements are being held up pending the arrival of his two sons.

Claim Trial Goes Into Fourth Day

INDICATIONS ARE CASE WILL REQUIRE FIVE DAYS
OR MORE

Trial of the claim of Lewellyn Milhon against the estate of his father, James M. Milhon, went into its fourth day in circuit court Tuesday with indications the evidence may not all be in before Wednesday.

Milhon is seeking $3,527 for alleged care of his father prior to his death, while the administrator is contesting the claim on grounds the son lived with his father against the latter's wishes and did not give him the care alleged.

Some delay was caused Tuesday morning when the jury was excused while Judge W. S. Donner ruled on the admissibility of certain evidence. It was believed attorneys in the case would make final arguments Wednesday but evidence was still being taken from witnesses Tuesday.

The case, which was venued to the local court from Martinsville, opened last Friday.

DRINKS TO SLIDE OVER BARS IN LAKE COUNTY

HAMMOND, Ind., Dec. 5.—(UP)—Industrial cities of Lake county last night prepared to defy the ban placed on sale of whiskey by the drink in Indiana by the state liquor advisory commission.

It was Lake county which led the fight for draught beer after the state beer control law prohibited the sale except in bottles. Draught beer finally was legalized.

City officials here and at Gary and East Chicago indicated they would not halt the sale of liquor at bars already established. They pointed out that unless a liberal interpretation is placed upon the regulations Lake county residents will go across the Illinois state line and spend their money for drinks there.

Things Looking Up For Unemployed

MORE THAN 500 ARE EARNING
OWN LIVELIHOOD ON MADE
WORK PROJECTS

Things are looking up for more than 500 former unemployed men in Putnam county now at work on made-work projects.

A total of 394 men went to work Monday on federal civil works relief projects, 100 more are employed on states road 43 widening, a state project, and 38 others are employed by contractors on the road 43 cutoff south of Greencastle, and on state road 136 in north Putnam county.

Local civil works board members stated Tuesday that the present unemployment relief campaign will last until the middle of February, unless federal funds allotted for this work are exhausted sooner.

Partial reopening of the cement plant also has returned a number of men to work who ordinarily would have been idle this winter.

Citizens Prevent Opening Of Polls

LOUISIANA VOTERS CLAIM
HUEY LONG "HAND PICK-ED" BALLOT

HAMMOND, La., Dec. 5, (UP)—Mobilized citizens, some passively resistant, others using force, defeated Senator Huey P. Long's political administration and prevented the opening of the polls for a federal election today in Louisiana's sixth congressional district.

The citizens, claiming that Senator Long's regime "hand picked" a ballot listing only Mrs. Boliver E. Kemp as candidate for congress to succeed her late husband, refused to vote.

Flying squadrons of armed citizen-deputies were out before 5 a. m. today in this section, bent on closing all polling places that they found.

So effective was the revolt that at 8 a. m. Judge Lee Ponder, the Long lieutenant in the parishes of Tangipahoa, St. Helena, and Livingston, announced that the election was officially called off in each of those parishes.

"We don't agree with this adverse court order, but because we are law abiding citizens, we will abide by it," he said.

LIQUOR TO BE SOLD ONLY IN DRUG STORES

WHISKY REGULATIONS FOR IN-DIANA MADE PUBLIC
MONDAY NIGHT

PROHIBITION ENDED TODAY

Natural Wines May Be Sold At Eating Places, Excise Director
Announces

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 5.—On the eve of repeal of the eighteenth amendment regulations were issued last night which forbid the sale of whiskey by the drink in Indiana.

It can be purchased only in drug stores in sealed containers. No physician's prescriptions will be necessary except on Sundays, election days and between the hours of 11 p. m. and 7 a. m. on week days.

Natural wines may be sold by the drink in restaurants, hotel dining rooms, dining cars and ship dining rooms.

The regulations were promulgated by Paul P. Fry, state excise director, on recommendation of an advisory commission appointed recently by Governor Paul V. McNutt when it became apparent that repeal was at hand.

The regulations were based on the Indiana liquor law passed by the state assembly at its last session. The legislature repealed the state's drastic bone dry law and enacted the liquor control statute which was designed primarily to legalize the manufacture and sale of 3.2 percent beer.

The law, however, contained a broad enacting clause which provided that it might be "liberally construed" by the excise director to the end of preventing the return of the "open saloon."

The new regulations broaden the provisions of the law as to wholesalers of spirituous liquors to provide for wholesale druggists or wholesale food establishments. Heretofore only wholesale druggists were authorized to handle the liquor.

The license fees of $250 remain the same.

Drug stores which qualify as retailers must have been in business for at least three years. That provision is set out in the law. Regulations prohibit deliveries of liquor and limit the amount to be sold to four quarts to a person on any one day.

Quantities of less than one pint may be sold, but they must be in sealed containers and the law provides that the tax shall be 25 cents a pint or fraction thereof.

Fry explained this provision probably will preclude the sale in less than half pint containers.

At the time of purchase from the retailer the purchaser is to be required to execute an application on a form prescribed by the excise director. The application must be signed by the purchaser and witnessed by the representative of the retail permit holder who makes the sale.

Retailers are prohibited from selling spirituous liquors to minors, persons of unsound mind, inmates of correctional, charitable or penal institutions, habitual drunkards or persons who are intoxicated at the time of sale.

The regulations specifically prohibit the consumption on the premises.

Another regulation designed to govern price prohibits sale of spirituous liquors at a price in excess of that which will return a fair profit to the permit holder and in the event of a complaint the excise director is authorized to make an investigation.

Retailers also are forbidden to display spirituous liquors or their containers in show windows.

"Night and Day"

Apparently Rita Gentry Bishop, 19-year-old Chicagoan, has a keen sense of humor, for she can laugh although she is charged with bigamy. Rita, it is alleged, married a window trimmer, who worked days, in September and eloped with a cafe proprietor, who works nights, in November. The latter brought the charge.

Art Exhibit To Open Wednesday

WILL BE HELD IN BASEMENT OF EAST COLLEGE. MANY FEATURES

An interesting feature of the opening of the exhibition of ceramic sculpture by Wayland Gregory, which is to be held in the basement of East college on Wednesday evening, will be the modeling of a head from life by Forrest Stark of the John Herron School of Fine Arts. Mr. Stark is head of the sculpture training at the art school. He has a background of experience in the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, of European study, and of teaching in Cornell university. For his demonstration he will choose a subject from his audience. Of interest, also, will be the discussion of the ceramic figures on display by Miss Anna Haselmann, curator of the John Herron Art Museum.

Although none of the figures in the exhibition are massive, there is a strong feeling of vigor and power in many of them. The delicacy of treatment in others attests a fine sensitivity and a discriminating feeling on the part of the artist.

Mr. Gregory has developed an individual style based on a thorough knowledge of the craft and an understanding which carries his work beyond mere technical skill. In "Ichabod Crane," a fine example of stained terra cotta in rose and green, he is delightfully humorous. The lanky Ichabod, astride his nag, appears reading a book while his horse curves its neck to nibble stubble at its feet.

Equally amusing in its own way, is "Globe Fish," a plump little figure in crackle glaze. "Neptune," god of the sea, is highly fantastic and imaginative. "Capital and labor" is a symbolic group in which a heavy horse lifts a menacing foot over a wriggling worm. "Elegy," a crackle glaze in gray and green, touched with orange, is posed in such a manner that grief is expressed in every line of the figure. Also in a serious vein is "Supplication," a piece of waxed stoneware which bears out the title from whatever angle it is viewed. It confirms the contention of the modernist school that spirit is stressed when the representation of the body is disregarded.

For the enjoyment of many moods, expressed in many manners, the stimulating artistry of Wayland Gregory promises to be an unusual treat for residents of Greencastle. Lorado Taft, himself, has enthusiastically characterized Gregory as "one of the most interesting and exuberant talents" he has known. The exhibition will open on Wednesday evening, Dec. 6, at 8 o'clock.

UTAH DELAYS RATIFICATION OF REPEAL

FORMAL ACTION ON PROHIBITION MAY BE POSTPONED
UNTIL EVENING

2 P. M. RECESS SCHEDULED

Convention Met At Noon But Mid-Afternoon Recess Was Tentatively Agreed Upon

STANT LAKE CITY, Utah, Dec. 5, (UP)—Delegates to Utah's repeal convention decided today to delay the effectiveness of prohibition repeal by five hours in order to permit a national radio broadcast of convention proceedings.

Ray L. Olsen of Ogden, a leader in the successful Utah repeal campaign, declared without qualification that the convention, scheduled to meet at noon, MST, would recess soon after convening until 7 p. m. MST.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5, (UP)—The impending end of the nation's 13-year experiment of prohibiting the use of alcoholic beverages found the government in virtual control of the liquor industry today with far-reaching economic and social effects expected to result from the change. Utah's ratification was the final move required to legalize liquor.

The fight for repeal, long believed hopeless, has been accomplished with such speed since Michigan voted for it April 3, that many details of the government's program of temporary control remained to be worked out.

The promulgation of codes and marketing agreements in the last two weeks, however, has established the government's regulatory power over distillers, importers and brewers, with prospects that it will be extended to wholesalers, rectifiers and vintners before the week is over.

As soon as Utah ratifies President Roosevelt planned to proclaim repeal, starting a shift of the burden of recovery taxes from business to liquor, the levies and tariffs on which are expected to yield upwards of $500,000 a year.

This shift of the tax burden, together with a renewal of employment in the liquor and allied industries, was regarded as the principal economic effect of repeal from the government's viewpoint.

On the score of social change was the claim of repealists that low liquor taxes and effective control laws would result in the banishment of the bootlegger and allied criminals who take a toll of millions of dollars yearly from legitimate enterprise.

Repeal created new problems for the government. Forces hitherto engaged in prohibition enforcement henceforth will be concentrated in protecting dry states and preventing tax evasion, smuggling and illicit liquor manufacture.

Half the states remain dry. Of the others, most have enacted control measures of varying provisions, reinforcing federal regulation which will be exercised at least until congress acts by the federal alcohol control administration. It already has begun to function under Chairman Joseph H. Choate, Jr.

In a statement briefly touching on policy, Choate reiterated that hard liquors would "be discriminated against in favor of light wines and beers."

Accordingly, no provisions for permits, plant control or production limits, such as were imposed on distillers, were contained in a code for brewers formally approved by President.

BRAZIL, Ind., Dec. 5.—Arthur C. Williams, age 19, of Putnam county, and William H. The youths aggravated their charge by admitting that they carried a loaded shotgun which was held by one boy on guard while the other loaded up the wheat.

NUDISTS DROP SUN BATHS TO ENTER LAW COURTS

PARIS, (UP)—Inhabitants of Phrypholis, or the Island of the Nudes, are threatened with a breadless diet and they even may have to swim to the mainland if the lawsuits of the baker and ferryman are won in Paris courts.

The disciples of Drs. Gaston and Andre Durville are being subjected for the first time to the disturbances of a clothed civilization. Until now, when they shed their garments to partake of the benefits of nature in a sun-drenched island in the Seine not far from here, they shed also the difficulties of a well-dressed life.

The island baker contended for a 99-year concession to furnish bread and pastry to the nude-clad dwellers, but with the refusal of a court to grant him the right to end his contract.

The second suit concerning the ferryman brings to light the fact that he is only a ferryman in his spirit.

time and that he isn't sparing enough time from his business of being a restaurateur to give his best customers adequate transportation. The Doctors Durville, therefore, are bringing suit against the rowdy restaurant runner.

162-YEAR OLD CELEBRATED

VISALIA Cal (UP)—John (Scott) Martin was 90 when prohibition was voted, too old to change his opinions. That is why, police explained, they had to arrest the 162-year-old man when the 35th state voted to repeal the 18th Amendment. They claimed Scotty "celebrated" a little too enthusiastically.

MOVIES

AT THE GRANADA

Paramount's "Too Much Harmony," sensational musical comedy extravaganza currently playing at the Granada Theatre, lists a cast of favorite screen stars including Bing Crosby, Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Judith Allen, Harry Green, Lilian Tashman and Ned Sparks.

The film, the third musical comedy has appeared in for Paramount, reveals the top-notch stunner of America as a musical comedy star who is engaged to the wrong girl, a scheming doll-daddy blonde. He falls in love with another girl, campaigns for her behind and before the fact, lights and finally wins her after an amusing series of highly interesting sequences.

In addition to being the focal point of the romantic plot, Crosby sings several brand new hit tunes, especially composed for him. Jack Oakie and Skeets Gallagher are cast as a team of footlight fools who mistakenly get high-hat when they hit Broadway.

Judith Allen, last seen in Cecil B. DeMille's "This Day and Age," is the romantic interest; Lilian Tashman is the vicious vampire; Harry Green plays the role of a harassed theatrical producer; and Ned Sparks, famous dead-pan comic, is also in an important comedy role.

Bombshell

by LEBBEUS MITCHELL

CHAPTER XII

ROMANCE A LA STUDIO

"What a pathetic face to Gifford! You forget all these beautiful things you have seen!"

Gifford read from a headline in a newspaper in his hand. "Love, Hurler in Burns Home." That's the kind of line that suits you, I am afraid I've been rather a bombshell."

"You mean you stand by your word?" asked Lola, beginning to bristle.

"Certainly. I've done very well in adding by their wishes," Mrs. Middleton looked fondly at her son.

"Gifford, you see, is a bombshell."

That speech was rather unfortunate; it aroused Lola's anger to a pitch of fury. She flung herself out of her seat.

"Gifford is a snail! That's what I'll give him away with," she said, "I would not have found him in a duck pond."

"Please!" said Mrs. Middleton, "Gifford is a lady," continued Lola, beginning to rub with her hand and anger, and pointing to Gifford and his father, "and they're partners, then I'm Almie Bempie McPherson on a raft! You can take your Boston and your blood-liners and your Bunker Hills and stuff a rod with them! And then you can stuff the codfish! Come on, Lola!"

She went, sobbing out of the room. Pops and Brother stood up grandly and followed her out to the car at the entrance of the inn.

Space Hanlon came up to her, put his arm about her and led her a short distance away from Pops and Brother.

"I'm sorry, Screw — really I am."

"Thanks for standing up for me, Space," she said to her handkerchief.

"What the heck. I was just trying to make them see daylight."

"They can live in a tub for the rest of their lives for all I care."

"Suppose it would have been all right if you old man and your brother hadn't showed up. After all, they're pretty thick."

"What's wrong with Pops and Brother?" asked Lola, becoming her get back to the wardrobe department — and if you let Miss Burns catch sight of you on the lot, it's back to pounding the pavement for you."

A big floral wreath was in Lola's dressing room at Monarch Pictures studio: "WELCOME BACK, LOLA. MONARCH NEEDS AND LOVES YOU!" Sandy looked anxiously at his watch as the make-up man was busy on her face.

"Mac," called Lola, "Did you call up Paint Spruce?"

"Yeah, but they said Mr. Hanlon checked out last night."

"Oh, dear."

"Car's here, Lola," said Sandy. "Let's go!"

In the ante-room Lola stopped to speak to Miss Mac. "You try calling the steamship lines at San Pedro. Monty says boats sail for Tahiti from there. Find out if Space is on the passenger list. I can't let him go off like that. I've got to see him."

"She stopped at night of Space Hanlon in the doorway of the porch. "Oh, Space, you're here," she said, softly.

"Well, I'll be darned!" said Space, after a pause, as if to himself. He took Lola's arm, led her back into her dressing room and shut the door.

"What... what is it, Space?" asked Lola, half timidly.

"Didn't you really want me to go to Tahiti?"

"Well, I... I at least wanted to say good-bye."

"Do you want to say it now?"

"Space."

"What?"

"Oh, I don't know." She began to snifle.

"Gee, I never thought we'd come to this," said Space, wonder in his voice.

"To what, Space?"

"This." He leaned down suddenly, took her in his arms and kissed her lips. It was a long kiss and when their lips parted, they looked into each other's eyes. Then Lola hugged him to her, her cheek against his.

"Oh, Space!" said Lola, ecstatically. "Maybe that's the reason we fought so!"

They kissed again, and drew suddenly apart at the sound of a voice. It was the voice of Mrs. Wendell Middleton of Boston, from outside the window of Lola's dressing room.

"I tell you we can't dress in those oldtime self. "They didn't do anything just natural, straightforward people."

"It's the picture racket, too, Lola. But I put a tag on you with ladies and gentlemen."

Space had been leading her away from the inn. She stopped short. "What's wrong with the pictures? It's perfectly honest work, isn't it?"

"Well, you're out of it anyway. You can go away and meet other people. One consolation, you can't be miserable as that gang back at the studio. Gillette had it coming to him for mismanaging you. He woke up too late to what you've really got on the ball. And New York will probably make him take the nose out of his own pocket for that 75 grand on the unfinished picture."

"They can't do that!" exclaimed Lola, again stopping short. "It isn't Mr. Gillette's fault."

"What do you care? It's not your fault. Let 'em burn your fan mail!"

She halted suddenly, set her jaw and hurried back towards the car.

"Nobody's going to burn my fan mail, and nobody's going to make Mr. Gillette pay for something he didn't do! Get in, Pops and Brother, I'm going to pack up and go back to the studio. It's an awful dump, but I guess I'm crazy, but it'll be something to talk about to the rest of the bunch in the big house when they finally put me there!"

Space Hanlon walked into the Middleton's room at the Desert Inn. Mr. Middleton was lying on the couch in his stocking feet; Gifford sat in a chair cleaning his nails.

"Well, you Anzacs," cried Space, "It worked like a Tiffany on the roller coaster and is screaming happily on all the turns." He handed them a bunch of money.

"There's the final payment and you're my favorite character actors of all time!"

"We wouldn't have considered any undignified proceedings if it hadn't been such a bad season," said Mr. Middleton.

"What we really want," said Mrs. Middleton, "is a chance at Monarch."

"Drop in on me tomorrow and I'll guarantee the three of you two weeks' work. See that those outfits

BALL STATE TONIGHT

Both Ball State and DePauw will open the 1933-34 basketball season on the Bowman gym floor here this evening. Coach Moffett's Tigers, with the exception of Isley, will receive their baptism in varsity competition while the lineup from Muncie will be composed mostly of veterans.

In speaking of the tilt tonight, Bob Barnett of the Muncie Morning Star said Monday:

Ball State's Cardinals begin tomorrow night a season that will take the red and white banners through foreign battlefields until February 28.

The DePauw Tigers are to afford the proteges of Branch McCracken their first opposition in a game at Greencastle tomorrow night. The red-clad open their home season against the N. A. G. U. team of Indianapolis, on Saturday night.

"Only three men are certain to stand against the DePauw quintet, Melvin Wilson, of Noblesville, center, and Charles Leeman and Herschel King, guards. All three were regulars last season.

The forwards will be chosen from a quartet including Todd and Anson from last year's squad and Ned Schuck and Lewis Henry sophomores. Until late last week it was thought probable that Todd and Anson would get the starting call, but it is being whispered this week that the sophomore pair may be used because of their added height. It is thought certain that the combinations will not be broken. Todd and Anson playing together and Schuck and Henry entering, and leaving the floor at the same time.

The starting team will average close to the six foot mark no matter which of the combinations is used. Wilson, Schuck, Henry and Leeman are close to the two-yard mark.

(BULLETIN)

Coach Moffett told us today noon that he would most likely start the following lineup against Ball State tonight:

Isley, forward.
Hickman, forward.
Townsend, center.
Youngblood, guard.
Lee, guard.

Saturday, Charley Edmondson and his Tiger Cubs invade Martinsville to exchange shots with the Artesian City basketballers. We have been informed from an authentic source that the Greencastle boys are hoping to get revenge for the setback handed the local quintet in the final game of the state finals last March.

Glen Curtis, in our estimation, is just about the premier net coach in the state. Glen has said several times that folks could pick the teams and he'd beat them. And he's done it time after time. Bedford and a number of other outfits will vouch for this. We don't believe there's a high school basketball menter in all Hoosierdom who can key his players up for a game like Curtis. But we will say, that whether the Artesians are all primed for Greencastle or not, the Tiger Cubs are going to Martinsville determined to put up a real battle and that's all their most loyal backer could ask.

Do you remember—

When Greencastle beat Martinsville in the state tourney at Bloomington in 1929?

When Martinsville always had a special telegraph wire to the gym during a game here?

When the Cubs whipped Martinsville 29 to 9 on Martinsville's own floor?

When Glen Curtis wasn't coaching at the Artesian City?

12,000-MILE ROAD TO EXTEND FROM ALASKA TO BRAZIL

Project Conceived Four Years Ago. Some Sections Already Completed. Others are Passable

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5, (UP) — Largest single highway project ever undertaken, the 12,000 mile International-Pacific highway is projected to begin at Fairbanks, Alaska, follow down the Pacific coast to Valparaiso, and terminate at Buenos Aires. Some sections already are completed. Others are passable. In Central America, most of the route has been surveyed.

From Mexico southward the route would be the same as the long-discussed "Inter-American" highway. President Roosevelt has offered to finance the survey from Panama to Santiago, Chile, if the governments concerned, at a cost of probably $500,000.

The tremendous undertaking of a Pacific road was conceived four years ago in Southern California. Since then, such men as Harry Chandler, powerful western publisher, and Pyke Johnson of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce have become identified with the plan. The Automobile Club of Southern California has successfully scouted the route as far south as El Salvador, having sent two motor caravans from here.

Sponsors of the road do not urge an over-night spurge of primary construction from here to Cape Horn. But they have obtained pledges that the participating nations will lay out their road building programs hereafter with a view to completing segments of the route as soon as possible.

Approximately 25 per cent of the International Pacific highway is an accomplished fact. The route from Hazelton, British Columbia, down the coast to San Diego and thence eastward to Nogales on the Mexican border, is a continuous stretch of 3,000 miles of primary highway.

South of Nogales, through Mexico and Central America, little major construction has been completed. But here and there, particularly in Mexico, small units of the inter-continental thoroughfare are being built.

Peru spent much money and effort on highways before the depression, including some excellent dirt roads in the mountains. Latest reports from Lima say that all but about 100 miles of the road's Peruvian section may be used by automobiles, although some parts are not in good condition. Two important bridges remain to be constructed.

North of Peru is perhaps the most difficult terrain on the entire route. But the Columbian minister of public works announced not long ago, in connection with the inauguration of a motor road from Bogota to Caracas, Venezuela, that sufficient construction had been completed to permit highway communication between Bogota and Quito, Ecuador, soon. From Quito to the Peruvian border on the south there is no road.

Chile is proud of the construction already completed on her 1,000-mile section over native desert and mountains. Cars have crossed the Andes between Buenos Aires and Santiago, and although most of the north-south road is dirt, the Chileans feel that they have contributed perhaps more than any of their neighbors to the attainment of the great international ideal.

HERE NEXT WEEK

HASSIL SCHENCK

Hassil Schenck, deputy state organizer of the Indiana Farm Bureau, will assist the county organization here next week in the annual drive for renewal of memberships and for new members, according to local officials.

Mr. Schenck will represent the state offices at Indianapolis. His home is in Boone county where he has been a well-known leader in farm bureau activities for several years. He will arrive at farm bureau headquarters in the county here next Monday and will remain all week attending meetings and giving assistance in thoroughly organizing each township unit to make a farm to farm canvass for 1934 memberships in the organization. The local management is anxious to increase the membership over this year.

"Numerous and far-reaching accomplishments have been made by the farm bureau in both state and nation during the past year," says Mr. Schenck, "and farmers everywhere are realizing the benefits to be gained by a stronger organization. A greatly increased membership is expected if every farmer in the county is personally invited to come in. No doubt, many are awaiting the invitation which will be given them next week."

"All other groups are organized for the perpetuation of their rights and interests. Many have signed codes and have been brought closely together to protect their business or industry. An unorganized agriculture cannot keep pace. Other groups are advising and expecting farmers to organize solidly. This is our chance to gain and retain equality for agriculture."

Copious Tears Are Shed By Victims At Demonstration Of Tear

It apparently was a sad occasion. Between forty and fifty bankers, bank vigilantes and local business men were in tears.

Even the reporter broke down and wept.

But there was a reason for the copious tears. The local group was being given a practical demonstration of the value of tear gas in the war against bank bandits.

Representatives of an Indianapolis tear gas manufacturing concern arranged the demonstration for 9 o'clock Monday evening at the old garment factory on north College avenue.

One of those who shed the most tears was Perry Rush of the First-Citizens Bank and Trust company. Rush refused to leave the building when others fled, preferring to stay with the demonstrating officials. He also had the privilege of learning the "feel" of the tear gas weapons by firing the various types.

Containers ranging from a .38 calibre revolver size cartridge to a .10 gauge shotgun shell were fired in one end of the building to give those present an idea of how quick the fumes spread and how effective the gas is in rendering helpless a victim.

Shots were fired from tiny pen-size guns to larger squeeze type pistols, the fumes shooting in a funnel-shaped effect from the mouth of the gun, then diffusing and permeating the entire interior of the old factory building. Only a few seconds were required for the heavier-than-air fumes to strike one end of the building, against which they were fired, then rebound and spread back to the group waiting to feel the gas effects.

As soon as the fumes spread the victims began shedding tears reaching for handkerchiefs and crying sensation in the nose and first notified the victim by the first tear gas. Most of these fled from the building.

It was explained that the gas formed by a crystalline substance which is burned by an equal amount of black powder when the gas is fired. A puff of smoke is seen as the shell explodes and the gas itself is invisible.

Fired directly into the face of the bandit the gas renders the victim temporarily helpless, but the wears off in a few hours and the victim suffers no permanent harm. Besides the demonstration, with hand-operated guns the tentatives displayed and used electrically by stepping on buttons concealed in various parts of a bank. This weapon which is camouflaged under a shade of ceiling fires five shells simultaneously and quickly renders anyone building helpless.

The demonstration was most interesting and at least convinced present that tear gas is most effective in combatting bank bandits.
